The world flipped upside down in an instant, your surroundings melting away into a bright, ethereal light. You blinked, confused, in the pulsating glow of a vibrant atmosphere they call Heaven. Floating clouds glimmered beneath a pink-hued sky, giving way to a spectacular city filled with gleaming structures and surreal landscapes that shifted and glimmered, bathed in the soft radiance of divine hues.

You stood there, feeling small and baffled. "W-what is happening?"

A gentle rustling behind you pulled your attention. You twisted around to see figures flitting gracefully through the airwas this how angels felt?

Suddenly, you noticed the most profound change of them alleach one glimmered with white light and edged in shimmering yellow. You didna glorious angelic robe that hugged your slender form, the edges adorned with delicate light blue trimmings reminiscent of clouds floating seamlessly in the heavens above. It made you feel like royalty, ethereal and free, while dainty heels added a playful touch. "I look absolutely fabulous!" The laughter bubbled out, pure and delightful, carrying through the air.

In this radiant realm, the remnants of fear dissolved completely, and every thought of mankind faded away. You felt the ticklish echo of joy each second; your memories were whisked away like petals upon the breeze, leaving a pristine surface ready to embrace the new. "I have always belonged here!" you marvel as warmth blossomed in your chest.

The laughter transformed into a melodic hum as pieces of yesteryear melted into a radiant ether of joy. You were never meant for a life of shadows; you were born of sunlight.

Suddenly, an overwhelming wave of recognition rippled through you. "I was created to be here, among the seraphim!" Realization coursed through your veins, filling the void left from your memoriesno trace of a life you thought was yours remained, only the eternal bliss of a heavenborn angel, a seraphim, wings flapping, ready to dance among the stars.